How to organise your quiz

Planning ahead is key if you want to get as many people involved, and raise as much money as possible.

Set a date and time and let EVERYONE know. You can post about it on social media, send invites by email or give people a call.

One of the best ways to do it is by setting up an event on Facebook. You can invite all your contacts and they will get alerts whenever you post any updates.

Visit our website to download social media graphics that can help... including graphics for your BaZOOMba Quiz Facebook Event.

Decide on how you are going to hold your quiz.

Is it going to be a virtual quiz or a small socially distanced gathering? If you are going digital then many people are using ZOOM (see what we did there) to host their events. You can download ZOOM as an app or access it via their website. You can set up a meeting and put the link in one of your social media posts or forward it on in a text or message.

You can use other digital platforms depending on how many people you have taking part. Check out House Party, Facebook Messenger and WhatsApp if you only have small groups taking part.

Or you could go live on Facebook! This way everyone could see you asking the questions and would be able to interact with each other by commenting as the quiz goes along.

How to raise funds

There are a few ways you can raise funds from your quiz event. The simplest is to ask for a donation (£2 is a good starting point) and set up an online giving page on JustGiving, Virgin Money Giving or a social media platform such as Facebook. The benefit of raising money online is there's no fuss with sending the money to us, it's all automatic!

You'll be able to see who has donated (make sure to ask them to leave their name). If you wanted to be super strict, you could even keep the ZOOM link back and only send it to participants when they have donated... channel your inner Anne Robinson!

Here are some links to giving platforms

You can also fundraise on the night!

Run a prize draw and charge a little extra on your entry price.

Hold a raffle and ask everyone to donate an extra pound.
